

The Exotic Feline Breeding Compound's Feline Conservation Center

A wildcat zoo and research center dedicated to the protection and preservation of endangered felines

Ever been eye-to-eye with a Leopard?

The Feline Conservation Center is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) wild feline breeding facility operated by the Exotic Feline Breeding Compound (EFBC).

Natural habitat cages offer close-up viewing of some of the world's rarest cats. We are located in Rosamond, California, just over an hour's drive north of Los Angeles on Highway 14 (the Antelope Valley freeway).

EFBC/FCC houses more than 70 wild cats ranging in size from the diminutive sand cat to larger species such as leopards, tigers, and jaguars. Visit EFBC/FCC and learn more about some of nature's most majestic creatures. Our Amur leopard, Jaguar, Fishing Cat, Sand Cat, and Pallas' Cat breeding programs are renowned worldwide.

Volunteer opportunities and internships offer training and education for individuals 18 and older.

Other Methods of Support:

Adoption Program - No, you don't get to take a cat home! You pay us each month for their food bill, so the price varies depending on the size of the cat. Includes full membership privileges, and free admission to June Twilight Tour. Minimum commitment is 6 months. Pay for 11 months at once, get the 12th month free!

Special Projects – We're slowly replacing older cages with large natural habitat enclosures, ask about expansion plans. We have a modular bathroom and classroom that need funds to finish installing as well. You can also donate towards installation of solar panels. Memorial donations are also welcome. Ask about including us in your will.

Exit 14 Freeway at Rosamond Blvd, go West 3.5 miles, turn right on Mojave-Tropic (at stop sign), then left on Rhyolite
